Chester Gets Two New Industrial Plants

160 PERSONS WILL BE GIVEN EMPLOYMENT

Roofing and Ebonite Companies Will Expand.

BUILD FACTORY

$160,000 Investment Obtained by Trade Board.

Two new industries, representing an investment of $160,000 and providing employment for 160 persons will be established in Chester at once, E. V. Wehner, president of the Chester Board of Trade, said today. Both were obtained through the efforts of the Board of Trade.

Excavation for the foundation for a factory was started Tuesday afternoon on a site along the Pennsylvania railroad, near the Harker Pottery company's plant in the east end of Chester, by the E. C. Otis Manufacturing company of Toronto, O., makers of built-up roofing and building paper. The plant will cost about $60,000 and will employ 60 persons by the end of the year, Wehner said. It is expected to be ready to operate by late spring or early summer. The building will be 184 feet in length and 50 feet wide. E. C. Otis of Toronto is the president of the company.

Cord Tire Plant Leased.

A company, headed by C. A. Smith Jr., of Chester, and backed by New Jersey capital, has leased the main building of the old Cord Tire company at Carolina avenue and Ninth street, which will be remodeled and equipped for the manufacture of ebonite, a hard rubber product.

The cost of remodeling and equiping the building is estimated at $100,000. The building will be ready for use late in the spring. The ebonite company will employ about 100 persons and will produce battery walls, radio panels and other electrical equipment.

Seek Other Industries

With the two new plants, Chester has obtained three new industries within a year, the other being the Harker Pottery company, which recently acquired and remodeled the old Edwin M. Knowles plant at a cost of $150,000.

The Board of Trade is now negotiating with three other companies—a stove foundry, porcelain refractories and a boiler works—for Chester sites.

In addition to the tire plant and the land leased by the roofing company, Chester has two other large manufacturing sites, located along the Ohio river, with excellent facilities for docks at each site, President Wehner and Chairman Thomas L. Young of the industrial committee said.

HOOVER ASKS SENATORS TO LOOSEN CREDIT

Non-partisan Move Instituted at White House.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—President Hoover began a move today to liberalize federal reserve bank rules to make eligible to rediscount paper held by small banks which is not now capable of being turned into cash.

In a series of bi-partisan conferences with leaders of both houses of congress, he outlined his plans and it was agreed that a Democrat, Senator Glass, of Virginia, would introduce such a bill later in the day.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—A non-partisan move to loosen the credit situation and strengthen the work of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, was instituted by President Hoover today at an early morning conference with six senators.

Shortly after the conference adjourned White House officials announced Senator Glass (Democrat, Virginia) one of the conferees, would introduce a bill designed to bring about these results.

Details concerning the method to be followed in relieving the credit situation and bolstering the $2,000,000,000 credit corporation, were not immediately available.

Three members of the finance corporation joined in the conference. They were Acting Secretary Mills of the treasury; Eugene Meyer, chairman of the corporation's board, and Charles G. Dawes, its president.

The senators were Watson (Republican, Indiana), Robinson (Democrat, Arkansas), Glass, Walcott (Republican, Connecticut), Townsend (Republican, Delaware), and Bulkley (Democrat, Ohio).

By The Associated Press.

Brown was testifying before the senate interstate commerce committee on his nomination as a member of the radio commission.

After Chairman Couzens had cited a Columbus newspaper article, Brown said when he became secretary of state he found several deputy registrars of automobiles had embezzled state funds.

NOTED AUTHOR OF MYSTERY STORIES DIES

Edgar Wallace, Aged 56, Succumbs in California.

ONCE NEWSBOY

Prolific Writer Started Life in Slums of London.

By The Associated Press.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., Feb. 10.—Edgar Wallace, who became one of the world's most prolific and highest paid writers after starting life as a newsboy in the slums of London, died this morning. Death was due to double pneumonia. He was 56 years of age.

The noted author of mystery stories was stricken Sunday with influenza. Pneumonia developed Monday night, and since yesterday the writer had been in a semi-conscious condition.

At his bedside when he died were his secretary of many years, Robert Curtis; Walter Huston, the actor, and his physician.

Wallace came to Hollywood from his home in England, several months ago to write scenarios.

Education Stopped at 10.

Known especially for his mystery novels, which he often wrote as rapidly as two a month, Wallace, however, laid no claim to literary genius.

Born in the squalor and poverty of London slums, Wallace at 10 sold papers, and his education in school stopped at that age. At 11 he engaged himself as a cabin boy on a trawler, which cruised the North sea. At 18, he enlisted as a soldier and saw service in the Boer war. It was then he developed a latent talent for writing.

He began first by paterning after the man he most admired, Kipling, writing vigorous poetry of soldier life.

Accumulating money, he purchased his discharge from the army and covered the rest of the Boer war as a special correspondent.

Funeral arrangements probably will await the arrival of Mrs. Wallace, who on hearing of her husband's illness arranged passage to New York on the liner Majestic, sailing today.

Wrote 150 Books.

A million and a half of Edgar Wallace's books have been sold in the United States, his publishers estimated today.

But that's a mere bagatelle as compared to his record the world over. Here are a few figures as given out by the publishers.

He has writen more than 150 books.

Five million copies are sold yearly.

He wrote the six most successful plays in London last year.

One quarter of all the books sold in England last year were written by him.

Conducted Racing Column.

In his spare time he conducted a racing column for a London newspaper.

Wallace was gray-haired, portly and claimed to be as lazy as he looked. He smoked continuously, four full packages of cigarets a day.

"When I'm working, 16 hours a day isn't unusual. The difficult thing is to get started. I sit and think about work for an hour or so, then plunge in it. When I get started, I can't stop."

His most profitable piece of labor was the play "On the Spot," he wrote it in two days and received $100,000 for it.

GOLFERS START TOURNEY PLAY

Detroit, Chicago Entrants Lead Qualifiers for Coral Gables Contest Feb. 14.

By The Associated Press.

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Feb. 10.—Howard Tryon of Detroit and H. F. Bowbeer of Chicago today led golfers qualifying for the St. Valentine's amateur tournament. Tryon's 77 and Bowbeer's 78, however, were in for more attacks before qualifying ends tonight.

E. G. Livesay of Columbus, Ohio, led yesterday's qualifiers with a card of 40-41—81.

TAXI DRIVER FACES PRISON

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 10.—Carl Dodge, Lima taxi driver must serve a term in Ohio penitentiary on a charge of shooting with intent to kill in connection with the robbery of Delphos, O., bank, although he did not fire a shot, the supreme court ruled today, in affirming his conviction.

Dodge is alleged to have driven the car which was used in the robbery of a Delphos bank, Feb. 5, 1931.

SCENES FROM SHANGHAI WAR ZONE

This huge piece of artillery is a sample of the weapons with which the Chinese defenders of Chapei held on to the battered ruins of their bombarded city. Most of the Chinese armament is hopelessly obsolete and the miracle is that it has not killed more Chinese than Japs. At the right are shown some of the real sufferers on whom the nailed fist of war falls most heavily. Scenes like this are common as Chinese women and children flee from stricken Shanghai, carrying all their possessions to some unknown destination—anywhere out of range of the terrible guns that hurl death.

Shouse, Democratic Chairman, Favors Unpledged Convention

Denies Combination With Al Smith and Raskob to Block Governor Roosevelt.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Jouett Shouse, chairman of the Democratic national executive committee, favors a party convention unpledged to any candidate, free to make its choice on the basis of conditions at the time it is held.

He disclosed this view in a statement to The Associated Press today. In it he denied having combined with former Governor Smith and Chairman Raskob to block the nomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Raskob, in New York, yesterday issued a similar declaration of neutrality.

Shouse was asked his intentions in the light of the declaration of Smith regarding his availability as a candidate, but he made no reference to the Smith statement.

Committee Poll Taken

This same statement caused the Louisville Courier-Journal to undertake a poll of Democratic national committeemen and women.

Replies from about a dozen of the more than 100 members ranged from: "I do not consider Governor Smith a contender" to "his statements make him a candidate," and some foresaw the chance for a compromise candidate, possibly Speaker John N. Garner.

Shouse revealed he intends to retire from party management after the convention, June 27, and that he has no intention of accepting public office thereafter

Urges Highest Class Delegates

He said he had been consulted as to particular candidacies by Democrats all over the country, but had invariably advised it would be wiser "from the standpoint of party and country alike," not to instruct delegates for anyone except where primary laws of the states made it necessary.

He urged at the same time the desirability of selecting the highest class of delegates, "a task extremely difficult if not wholly impossible where choice is made solely on the basis of the selfish interest of an individual candidacy."

Glad He's Home

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Oh, boy, I was glad to get my old big feet on American soil even if it has got a second mortgage on it.

Had the greatest trip I ever had in my life and I believe if everybody made it, might come back a little poorer, but better off in the feeling toward our country.

I know business is off—they say 60 per cent. Well, that still leaves us 30 per cent ahead of anywhere I have seen. If we can just let other people alone and do their own fighting, when you get into trouble 5,000 miles away from home, you've got to have been looking for it.

Yours,

Will Rogers

Two Brave Icy Bay To Save Fishermen

By The Associated Press.

SEBEWAING, Mich., Feb. 10.—Eleven fishermen, caught in a break-up of ice, were safe today because two of their number braved icy Saginaw bay to reach land and return with row boats for their companions.

Grover Pitcher, Sebekaing, and Alvin Ashbaker, Fairgrove, waded to shore yesterday when ice floes on which they were marooned drifted near land. Pitcher waded nearly a mile through waist-deep ice-strewn water.

Other men in the two groups were too far from shore to save themselves.

In groups the men had been fishing and setting nets through the ice when a sudden shift in the current caused the ice to break and start drifting toward Lake Huron.

ITALY READY TO END WAR

Lists Implements for Scrapping; Japan Defines Stand.

BY P. I. LIPSEY JR.,
Associated Press Writer.

GENEVA, Feb. 10. — Foreign Minister Dino Grandi of Italy and Ambassador Tsuneo Matsudaira of Japan presented the last two of the disarmament proposals of the five great powers to the world conference today.

The young black-bearded Italian foreign minister brought thunders of applause as he toiled off a list of war implements Italy stands ready to scrap, in it, capital ships, submarines, aircraft carriers, heavy artillery, tanks, bombing aircraft and chemical warfare weapons.

He also proposed revision of the laws of war to protect civilian populations. Afterward the plan was hailed as the first proposal for "real disarmament."

Ambassador Matsudaira, chief of the Japanese delegation, assured the conference that "notwithstanding the unfortunate situation in the Far East Japan is as eager as ever to further the cause of disarmament."

August Zaleski, Polish representative, presented a plan for "moral disarmament," pointing out that Ambassador Hugh Gibson of the United States "forcibly reminded us yesterday the best guarantee of security consists of our neighbors' good will."

Grandi's address brought three especially enthusiastic outbursts of applause when he said his country was willing to prolong the London naval treaty, to move toward actul disarmament, and to abolish many of the most important items on armament programs.

He said Italy rejected the French theory of security to precede disarmament. 'Without disarmament," he added, "there can be no security." He accepted the German demand that other nations disarm in the same proportion as Germany is forced to do under the Treaty of Versailles.

DR. KNIGHT, 73, FORMER DEAN AT O. S. U., DIES

Professor Emeritus in History Ill Ten Days.

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 10. — Dr. George Wells Knight, 73, professor emeritus in history at Ohio State university and former dean of the school of education, died in the University hospital here early today.

Dr. Knight fell ill ten days ago. Death was caused by pneumonia. His widow and a daughter survive him.

Dr. Knight, a graduate of the University of Michigan, joined the faculty of Ohio State university in 1885, his first class a group of four students from a student body of 900. The university enrollment today was approximately 16,000 students.

Expanded Two Departments.

He nominally, at the start, occupied the chair of history and English literature at the university, but it was his work that largely led to expansion of these departments into political science, economics, and eventually, the college of commerce and administration.

Dr. Knight taught actively for 43 years, numbering among his students George W. Rightmire, now president of the university. He retired in 1928.

He did not seek administrative duties.

He Also Wrote Books.

"My long suit," he once said, "Is with a group of students in front of me. My hobby is to get students to do their own thinking and to do it straight. To do that successfully means more than to write books which nobody will read."

He wrote books, nevertheless, among them a "History of Land Grants for Education in the Northwest Territory," "History of Higher Education in Ohio," and "The Government of the People of Ohio."

Horsemen Sweep No Man's Land in Shanghai District

Squadron Reported to Have Inflicted Heavy Casualties on Nipponese Who Have Been Laying Waste to Chapei With Artillery —Incident in Comparatively Quiet Day.

BIG GUNS ARE NOT FIRING; BOTH SIDES BELIEVED SHIFTING LINES

Action Also Subsides at Woosung, Where Tokyo Has Been Trying to Blast Enemy Loose From Their Forts — Defenders Reinforce Trenches Battered by Shellfire.

BY JAMES P. HOWE,
Associated Press Writer.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 10.—Tearing across No Man's Land in an old fashioned cavalry charge, a Chinese squadron was reported to have inflicted heavy casualties today on the Japanese who have been laying waste to Chapei with artillery.

It was an incident in a comparatively quiet day. Big guns were not firing and although machine guns were in action it was apparent both sides were shifting their lines. No one knew what was going to happen next.

Over at Woosung, where the Japanese had been trying to blast the enemy loose from their forts, the action also had subsided somewhat late this afternoon.

Sometime in the night the Chinese hoisted their five-barred flag of red, yellow, blue, white and black. It was on the highest flagpole in town and Japanese gunners concentrated their fire on it.

Meanwhile, the Chinese were reinforcing the trenches battered by raking shell fire.

Bridge Builders Battered.

The Japanese were working hard on a pontoon bridge across Woosung creek, but Chinese machine gunners were not making the job any too easy.

There were indications that part of the Chinese main force had been taken out of the Chapei lines and sent over to Woosung.

In the international settlement apprehension reigned and United States marines joined in building additional sandbag barricades and barbed wire defense. The guard was increased at several strategic points.

The authorities, who recently ruled that civilians must be off the streets at 10 p. m., moved up the deadline to 9 p. m.

JAPS BATTER WOOSUNG.

Another Attack Hurled Against Fortress and Village.

BY MORRIS J. HARRIS,
(Copyright, 1932, by The Associated Press.)

SHANGHAI, Feb. 10.—Japanese forces hurled another determined attack against the battered fortress and smouldering village of Woosung today after the Chinese were reported to have inflicted heavy casualties at Chapei with an old-time cavalry charge in the face of spitting machine guns.

At the same time, United States marines took up the heaviest burden of defense of the international settlement, a 10-mile line, much of it facing directly on Chapei, daily scene of shelling, bombing and heavy machine gun fire.

Horsemen Ride Against Foe.

The Chinese cavalry attack was reported to have occurred at Kiangwun, part of Chapei battlefront. The horsemen, the reports said, rode against the foe with a dash not unlike that of the riders of the Mongol chiefs of old, wielding their sabers with vigor though machine guns mowed them down.

They were finally driven off, according to reports, but not until they had inflicted heavy casualties with their outmoded warfare.

Leading Chinese commercial and banking organizations sent telegrams during the day to Secretary of State Stimson at Washington and to the British, French and Italian premiers, urging them to try to bring about a settlement of the Sino-Japanese dispute "in accordance with the ideals of the League

State Prohibition Inspectors O. P. Davis, Thomas Bush and W. C. Walters of Columbus, confiscated 165 gallons of liquor and mash Tuesday afternoon in a raid on an unoccupied house at 1202 Commerce street, Wellsville.

Fifteen gallons of liquor was brought to the city hall, while the remainder was dumped by the inspectors.

Last fall the same house was raided and a large amount of liquor and a still seized.

YANK SAYS WAR IN CHINA O. K.

Sherman Had Wrong Slant, Wisconsin Lad Insists.

BY MORRIS J. HARRIS
(Copyright, 1932 by The Associated Press.)

SHANGHAI, Feb. 10.—You can take it from Private W. H. Lawin, United States army, formerly of Cornucopia, Wis., that General Sherman had the wrong slant on this war business.

In fact, says Private Lawin, war isn't half bad, and he speaks with a measure of authority. Although he has had only nine months with the army, as a member of the second battalion, 31st infantry, he has had a front row reserved seat on the Chapei battle-front since his outfit took over part of the international settlement defense line.

Private Lawin was standing lone guard inside a sand-bag "pill box" when The Associated Press correspondent came across him. He was cold but cheerful, and not indisposed to hash up a little philosophy.

Having Time of His Life.

"You can tell the folks back home I'm having the time of my life," Private Lawin grinned, shifting from one foot to the other.

"It's a little colder here than in Manilla where our outfit had been stationed, and there's not so much night life, but there's action, and that's what I joined up for," he said.

"I've done a lot of traveling all right. First they sent me to Manilla, and just when I was getting used to the tropics they shipped me up here, where its nearly as cold as Cornucopia. There's been no leave since we got here and the quarters aren't comfortable—and too, we've been getting a lot of 'corned willy.' But I'm not kicking. This war makes up for a lot.

"I must say though, there are some ways that Cornucopia has got it over Shanghai, or Manila.

"First, take the girls at Cornucopia—

"Say, there's some mighty nice looking girls back there in Cornucopia and I've seen nothing here to compare with them. Fact is, I don't like the way the Chinese

HOOVER TURNS HIS BACK ON SOCIAL TASKS

White House Bans Receptions of Big Groups.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—President Hoover today turned his back on all purely social activities of his office.

The White House announced he would have to bar reception of big groups, such as conventions, for the next few months at least. Mrs. Hoover, alone will extend the courtesies of the executive mansion whenever possible.

"Extraordinary demands upon his time," was the reason given. He will receive committees and small delegations having conclusions or recommendations to lay before him. But plain handshaking, posing for group pictures and so on, are "out."

The new policy was aimed chiefly at the conventions. This is the George Washington bicentennial year, drawing an abnormal number of national gatherings. The tempting bait of White House receptions attracts many delegates. To them it is half an hour memorably spent. To the President it becomes an unending round of exhausting hospitality, while grave matters are kept waiting.

MANUEL HALLE 100 THURSDAY

Pioneer Cleveland Merchant Who Loaned Money to Rockefeller To Mark Birthday.

By The Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 10.—A pioneer Cleveland merchant who once loaned money to John D. Rockefeller Sr., celebrated his 100th birthday anniversary tomorrow.

The man who recalls helping Rockefeller is Manuel Halle. Rockefeller wanted him to take some stock in the young Standard Oil company, Halle said, but he refused.

Halle had greater faith in real estate. In his early years he worked days as a clerk, and spent his evenings looking for property to buy with his savings.

Although more than 200 friends were invited to celebrate the anniversary, only eight or 10 of the most intimate will be privileged to visit directly with the centenarian, to avoid strain on his heart.

HARRIS CASE TO BE REVIEWED

Steubenville Man Carries Conviction on False Pretense Charge To Supreme Court.

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 10.—The conviction of Caleb Harris of Steubenville on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses will be reviewed by the Ohio supreme court, it was decided today.

Harris was twice convicted in Jefferson county courts on a charge of obtaining $124.60 from Anthony Meola on a representation that he would pay a liquor fine against Meola. He won a retrial of the first case but the appellate court affirmed the second conviction.

By The Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 10.—Convicted of second degree murder of his wife, Thomas M. Shand, 46, a steamfitter, was under sentence today to life imprisonment in Ohio penitentiary.

"I loved my wife and always have. I'm not guilty and it's not a ju[illegible] verdict," Shand told Common Pleas Judge Lee E. Skeel just before sentence was pronounced last night.

Mrs. Shand was beaten and strangled to death Dec. 19. Her body was found in the wreckage of her bedroom four days later. At that time, police said the husband asserted his wife [illegible] locked herself in the room and that she was dead when he found her.

COLLEGE PAPER EDITOR OUSTED

C. J. Thurmond of Center Loses His Job for Story Expressing Views on Marriage.

By The Associated Press.

DANVILLE, Ky., Feb. 10.—Charles J. Thurmond's views on matrimony, published under the caption, "Stupidity of Marriage," have cost him his job as editor of the Cento, student publication at Center colloge.

Thurmond wrote that marriage "ends in wrecked lives and the casting of ugly blemishes on young lives having to come in contact with it."

The college discipline committee yesterday ousted him as editor. Thurmond's supporters claimed the storm was caused by "class politics," but their protests were unavailing.

Thurmond, a senior, will be permitted to remain in school. In a statement he said there was no one in college "who is stricter in his personal morals than I am," and that "I do not practice what is expressed as a possible solution to unsatisfactory marriage."

BOY CRAZY

by GRACE PERKINS

SYNOPSIS: Buttercup hair and an impudent face was popularity for Hope Ross. A zest for fun and her father's money carry her through many adventures. Once she was a tomboy, but now, almost 17, she acquires a date-book and a sophisticated manner. The charm of dances and parties and a train of dazzled boys catches all her interest. Her mother says she is boy crazy, but her father chuckles and continues to sign checks. The person most annoyed by Hope's admirers is her sister Goody, a "model young girl"—and unpopular. Hope's seventeenth birthday party includes so many acquaintances that it approaches a free-for-all. The crowd continues to gather on the Ross estate, and Hope wanders from guest to guest. She stays longest with Rusty, who wants her to marry him.

Chapter 3

A HUMAN BEAN BAG

HOPE rippled on:

Oh, there's Max. . . .Youhoooo, Maaax! . . . Sure, we'll dance. Isn't that a grand orchestra? They are going to play at Post Lodge this winter. . . .

Oh, don't hold me so close, Maaax, you're crushing my flowers. Well, even if you do send some, that will be tomorrow and I want these tonight. . . .

Papa Ross, his face shadowed by the visor of his Commodore's cap, sat on the railing of the broad white veranda, and gazed down on the party.

(Look at the way he watches her, whispered the weeping willow with a sigh. Such love can be unreasoning and blindly cruel. . .)

(Yes, yes, chattered the brook shrilly, she's his baby, you know. She's his baby, and his world is wrapped up in her. . . .)

(She's boy crazy. That's it, breathed the late roses, the cosmos, the asters and the huge bushes of golden glow. She's just boy crazy. . . .)

School was a side-line. A little planning took care of such an atrocious and insane slavery. Hope had been brought up by Frauleins and Mademoiselles, and in her childhood had traveled abroad, spending entire winters on the Riviera before the span of peculiar years that were known as the World war. Hence, Hope's ability in French and German were accepted matters, and English history could be magnificently faked. Good old Maaax could be counted on for mathematics, and one of the girls who longed to be in Hope's set obligingly did her Latin for her.

The autumn, then, was fairly free for more engrossing matters. Football games, and their proper sport costumes; an unforgettable trip to Yale for an afternoon in the Bowl, and evenings at Fraternity dances; shopping; theaters; Thanksgiving, divine week-ends; miserable vocal lessons—all these things kept Hope busy from seven or ten a. m. until eleven or two at night.

An outstanding brace of important problems occupied Hope's mind particularly, however. Both involving the party at Placid. Whom to invite, when one only had the privilege of six couples—five really, since Goody had to be included.

Not that Hope disliked her sister. Far from it. Hope would have been glad of companionship at home, but all her varied advances had been sulkily and a bit rudely snubbed. Hope had shrugged off Goody's sarcastic criticism with a flippant shoulder. It humiliated Hope that her sister, of all people, should deliberately remain a dud! And she couldn't help grimacing when Goody would stuff away chocolates and pastries and then wail because she had to amble to the women's department for dresses—or call in a seamstress to copy some hopelessly coy model in a size that would have caused its designer to faint.

Take this Placid party, for example! Why should Hope have to sigh over Goody's presence? Visualizing how Mama would back up each pale-lipped complaint that Goody would be bound to make? 'Cause who wants a wet blanket like Goody around with her prudish ideas?

Goody herself inspired the solution.

Her soft-eyed humble admiration of Charlie Rand was nothing short of disgraceful in Hope's private little code. Everyone saw it! Everyone, that is, except Charlie, who mooned around Hope throughout the entire Fall, grateful for what small favors she cast his way.

Mama and Papa Ross saw Goody's infatuation, and became highly chirpy over the idea of a romance for their forlorn and neglected twenty-year-old spinster. Charlie Rand was invited to dinner! Charlie was offered opera tickets on the nights that Papa Ross was too busy.

Hope dabbled in intrigue; delighting, merely for thrill, in treating Charlie exactly like a bean-bag to be tossed at will between Goody and herself. Deviling Goody into some exertion to appear charming and to act human while she teased Charlie, and cast a spell over him that caused him many a sleepless night.

"Oh, snap into it!" she shrugged at Goody's protests. "If you're not good enough to catch him now, you'll never be able to hold him. It's a fair game between us."

Suddenly, even Hope, with a queer little shock, realized the stark truth of Goody's enamored eyes. Her heart curled around the corners at the spectacle of Goody's awkward love-making.

So Hope erased herself quite neatly from Charlie's vision, whenever he arrived — leaving that young gentleman with hurt, grim lips and wounded, wondering eyes. Hope went further than that. She invited Rusty Crandall whenever Charlie was slated to appear, and openly flirted with him until his ears were red and his collar slightly damp; until he completely forgot a girl called Angel, who worshipped Rusty so that she practically said her prayers to him.

Poor Angel, who seldom had a date, but who would with blissful stupidity break any date the moment Rusty phoned her. . . . The girl who was always on hand, never "rushed," always could be counted on to fill in the last moment when an extra girl was needed. . . . She knew it, too—knew just how they all regarded her. But it didn't matter. Having no swell clothes, no jewelry worth sporting, turning three-dollar-and-ninety-five-cent hats into good looking models — nothing mattered as long as Rusty was on the party.

Never once did Hope take cognizance of the growing disillusionment in Charlie's pale face. She heard Goody tell Charlie one evening that "Hope is always that way—just an incorrigible flirt!" And knowing that Charlie believed it, she still didn't care—except as one cares when a man you go to the trouble of voting for doesn't get elected.

Fraternity dances—football—dancing lessons—kept Hope busy.

But one night, early in December, Charlie demanded to talk to Hope a few moments alone.

(Copyright, Grace Perkins)

Charlie's announcement gives Hope a wicked inspiration, tomorrow.

New Industries For Chester.

The Chester Board of Trade is on the job in the quest for new industries, judging from the announcement today that two companies, representing an investment of $160,000 and promising employment for 160 persons, will locate in the West Virginia city across the Ohio river.

Ground has been broken for the foundation for a $60,000 plant which will be erected by an Ohio corporation which manufactures built-up roofing and building paper, with the expectation of starting operations within the next six months.

The main building of the old cord tire plant in the eastern section of the city will be remodeled for the manufacture of ebonite, a hard rubber product. About 100 persons will be given jobs by the company which expects to begin operations late in the spring.

President E. V. Wehner and the industrial committee of which Thomas Y. Young is chairman, acting for the Board of Trade, should be congratulated for their activity in behalf of the neighboring city whose prosperity means much to East Liverpool, the pottery center of America.

Mr. Mellon's Task

Exercise of the public right to hold administrative acts open to questioning always is exercised, but not always wisely. There might well be practice of open-minded moderation in discussing President Hoover's appointment of Andrew W. Mellon as ambassador to Great Britain. Loose tongues wagging about doubtful premises are adding to misunderstanding at a time when straight thinking should be the national aim.

Friday morning the London Times said: "Nothing could be more welcome to this country than the news that the torch of the official American representation in London is to be passed from the hands of one of the most distinguished citizens of the United States to those of one not less distinguished."

A liberal paper, the News-Chronicle, said the appointment of Mr. Mellon was regarded with immense satisfaction and added: "A man great in power and influence in America, as his 12 years of service as secretary of the treasury show, he has always been sympathetic toward Britain and has taken a liberal view of the whole problem of international indebtedness. As ambassador he will do much to strengthen the understanding between the two countries and to insure coordination of policy in the future."

Surely, Mr. Mellon's countrymen can feel glad that the administration was able to call on a man of such favorable international repute to help in the solution o the problems it is dedicated to solving. Any one of several men might have been acceptable to Britain at this time, but none of them would have been received so enthusiastically as Mr. Mellon, who is thoroughly conversant with the common issues engaging the attention of the United States and Great Britain.

It is expected that a more satisfactory settlement of war debts and reparation payments will be one of Mr. Mellon's chief duties. In view of the interest federal taxpayers take in disposition of the debt and reparation Mr. Mellon's opinions as they have been expressed from time to time are timely.

He believes those who insist upon impossible terms are unconsciously working for entire repudiation of the debts. "We must settle upon such terms as will give our debtor reasonable opportunity to live and to prosper. More it will not pay and more we can not collect."

He never has entertained suggestions of cancellation. "We purchased supplies and services from France and the British empire by hundreds of millions of dollars. They had to be paid for in francs and pounds. We did not get those francs and pounds on credit—we paid cash for the—it must also be obvious that if the amounts to be paid by all our debtors are to be reduced and a corresponding reduction is to be made in the amount of reparations to be paid by Germany, the net effect of the change will be to transfer the burden of reparation payments from the shoulders of the German taxpayer to those of the American taxpayer."

Finally, in a statement to the house ways and means committee, this paragraph is found: "The settlements are made in the real interests of those American producers who must have a foreign market able to pay. The American producer needs these debt settlements. The entire foreign debt is not worth as much to the American people in dollars and cents as a properous Europe as a customer."

The task of carrying on the liquidation of the World war is worthy of Mr. Mellon and he is worthy of the task. There is real cause for regret in the fact that he is not 20 years younger as he prepares to tackle a colossal financial problem from the Court of St. James.

Faith That Never Ceases

Squealing brakes make a proper accompaniment for his pounding heart as he pulls the car over the curb to miss a resolute pedestrian crossing the intersection against a green light.

His nerves tingle sharply four blocks later when a lurching truck starts across an intersection on the last half-second of the caution light.

He is half-ashamed of himself a few minutes later when he nips the caution signal on a right turn and frightens an old lady into scurrying desperately for sanctuary on the curb.

A block later he instigates horn-blowing pandemonium by resolutely refusing to start until the light is green and the intersection is clear. A taxicab driver leers menacingly at him for holding up traffic.

He puts the car away, glad to be home safe. He wonders why there aren't more traffic accidents—everyone in a hurry to get somewhere so they can hurry back.

His wife says she read in the paper that some scientists plan to equip automobiles with vacuum tubes that would respond to impulses from a central station and take the place of traffic lights. Each car, then, would have its own traffic light system.

He turns the idea over slowly in his mind. His eyebrows raise slowly in doubt. He makes the best response America has devised yet to discourage groundless faith. Oh Yeah?

The Prince's Big Problem.

Selling the world on the idea that you were a great fellow and deserving of rapid advancement was an important requisite of success in the late boom years. It still is, but latterly the methods of appraisal have become considerably more painstaking, due quite likely to a let-up in the pressure of competition. Value is its own salesmen these days.

Americans are peculiarly fitted to understand what seems to be a personal problem troubling Edward, Prince of Wales, probable successor to his father, King George of England, therefore. The prince, too, has to sell the world on the idea that he is a great fellow, a job which he has been working on with fair success for a good many years.

The latest folurish in the campaign is entirely in the modern manner—moving pictures to show good subjects, wherever they may be that the prince is worthy of their respect and active support. Edward will be shown to them for instance, getting out of bed at a sane workingman's hour, 6:30 of a raw English morning.

For the benefit of Indian enthusiasm he will be shown drinking a large cup of tea grown and packed by Indians. For the benefit of office workers he will be shown "getting down" in the morning earlier than most of them do and sticking at his job for 14 hours a day. Nothing will be spared to make the prince out the fine fellow he undoubtedly is.

Occasionally, a rumor that the British throne is threatened by insecurity gets around in this country. Prince Edward, who will have to assume the risk of sitting on it some day in all probability, seems to be protecting his interests.

Still a Good Story

Doubt that the oath administered to Calvin Coolidge making him President of the United States following the death of President Harding was legal is interesting, but not important. No executive action of any importance was performed between the time the oath was administered and the time, 14 days, 11 hours and 56 minutes later when a second oath of undoubted legality was administered. In its first public presentation after all these years it appears like a question that may never be settled to complete satisfaction.

The story of the administration of the questioned oath by Mr. Coolidge's aged father, a notary public, is in a fair way of becoming one of the favorite national traditions, along with George Washington's innocent destruction of the cherry tree and Abraham Lincoln's trials of self education. The Vermon farmhouse setting, the oil lamp, the simple directness of the action and its vast importance to the American people made a forceful combination that appealed to the imagination then as now. It's still a good story, whatever happens.

The former president's action about expenditures has become proverbial. Perhaps the important part of the disclosure, so far as he is concerned, is the fact that he may have drawn $2,979.75 on his presidential salary illegally. It may require an extra week of column writing to balance the books before the matter is settled.

Ready for the Climax

The 22nd day of this month, George Washington's birthday, is the natural climax in national observance this year of that great founding father's bicentennial. It is unnecessary to urge that school's, particularly, observe it with fitting ceremonies; they already have caught the spirit of the occasion and made plans to express it.

Aside from the almost numberless formal observances planned for Washington's birthday this bicentennial year might well be made the occasion for wide private observance. The bicentennial commission has made available a mass of material to aid this purpose—to bring George Washington out of the austere gloom of history and present him to the present generation as a personality of extraordinary quality. Local committees can be of assistance in carrying out plans for universal observance of the nation's debt to its greatest citizen.

WESTERVILLE'S NAME.

By J. H. Galbraith.

For The Associated Press

It is a Dutch name, though modified so as to conceal the fact, that the village of Westerville bears This in spite of the fact that it was settled by New England persons. The original settlers were from Windsor, Conn., and went there in 1806. The founder of Westerville did not go until 12 years later He was Matthew Westervelt, and he came from Dutchess county, New York, which was settled by Hollanders. Westervelt had been on the ground for more than 20 years before the idea of establishing a town occurred to him.

Westerville was founded in 1839, but was not incorporated as a municipality until 1858. Westervelt seemed to have been a lover of education as well as a man of business ability, for it was he who procured the establishment in his town of the Blendon Young Men's Seminary. It flourished until the Methodists started Ohio Wesleyan university at Delaware, only 22 miles distant, with much better equipment than the seminary could hope to have soon. It was evident at once that an education institute of the kind in Westerville could not be maintained on an independent basis, and Westervelt came to its aid and opened negotiations with the United Brethren church to take it over and make it a college. Westervelt had given to the seminary a tract of 25 acres and some good improvements had been made upon it. This under the offer went to the United Brethren organization and became Otterbein college It was established in 1847.

Tomorrow: Death Cheated of 600,000

New York Day By Day

By O. O. McINTYRE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—I strolled along Broadway last evening comparing its tawdriness to the splendor of yesteryear. About all left of its heyday is the glitter. The great restaurants — Rector's, Churchill's, Shanley's and the Knickerbocker—are gone. Scenery-eating actors have given away to pansy performers.

The Empire alone is the last stand of the Broadway legitimate theater. The Astor is the sole survivor of the luxurious hotels flourishing a decade ago. The Paramount cinema is claimed by Broadway but is in reality reared on Seventh avenue.

Broadway of today is mostly a zig-zag of haberdashery shops, clattery lunch rooms, gown and perfume parlors, souvenir stores, walkup tailors and tabloids. Here and there in the motley array are catchpenny photo studios and store rooms given over to advertising demonstrations.

A touch of the Broadway that is gone is the black and gold sign over Churchill's old stand, reading, "Irving Berlin Publishing Company." The Winter Garden, once stronghold of the musical revue, is now flamboyantly crisscrossed with a ballyhoo for movies inside.

What is most impressive in the shifting change to the old street is the character of its promenaders. Once a walk along it provided a closeup of reigning theatrical stars, brightly rouged chorus beauties, celebrated song writers, jockeys, fight champions and deep-sea glamblers.

Too, there were dazzling spenders such as Foxhall Keene with his Desperate Desmond mustache and Freddie Gebhart, racounteurs such as Wilson Mizner and gourmets such as Diamond Jim. Also, Canfield, the gambler; Thorley, the florist, and his lapel carnation; John, the barber, and O'Malley of the Sun.

The passing parade today reveals drab pastels of tired Jersey commuters, tin horn sports, barkers for talkies, seedy sandwich men, tattered buskers dancing for pitched coins, third-rate ladies on the make, yap wagon "decoys," and visiting lodgemen who imagine they are seeing the town.

In the old days Sunday nights at Shanley's lured Broadway regulars. They sat at large tables, watching the floor show, sipping beer from perspiring mugs and indulging merry palaver. Over yonder Lillian Russell, Joe Weber and Lew Fields. Nearby Julia Sanderson and the dimunitive fashion plate, Tod Sloane. Also the tall darkly Oriental Nicky Arnstein with the hoydenish lady we know as Fanny Brice. Richard Harding Davis, silk stockinged reporter with the silver crooked walking stick. and Charlie Somerville who wrote his spicy but kindly White Way gossip for The World. Once in a while the pontifical Jim Huneker deserted Luchow's wassail for camaraderie of Shanley's in tow of Ben de Casseres. The "Merry Widow" waltz was "the" tune. Roast fowl and apple dumplings with Brown Betty sauce were Shanley's piece de resistance.

A favored haunt of those days was Joel's, which had the wainscoted coziness of a country inn. Downstairs the bar and upstairs the jumbled cafe with walls hung with welcoming plácards for returning troupers. Joel was the Rialto Rothschild. Piff-awmers sent him savings to bridge over summers "At Liberty." Joel was Joel Rinaldo, a queer bird of the Broadway night who twittered erudite tomes on the polygeneric theory and served Blue Moon cocktails that would knock you stiff as Menjou's evening shirts. He was an uncle of Mark Hellinger, who carries on the avuncular ambition writing tabloid threnodies for the Broadway miserere. Joel, himself, has retired to a porch of a quiet Brooklyn street to rock, read the classics and meditate upon the blessed promises. A noble Roman, Joel!

In a back room at Joel's after 3 a. m. one came upon distinguished and lusty drinking sun dodgers. At intervals, Edwin Markham, the poet. Also the wizard Mexican caracaturist, whose name eludes, but who retired at 10 a. m. daily. Too, the Grand Llama of Literature of that day—Bob Davis—at whom cubs peeped through a cafe trellis as one does at a Pope. Don Clark, Ed Hill and Ben de Casseres were regulars also.

Joel's would receive a high-nosed sniff amid the speakeasy splendor of the era, yet it was packed with more of the exciting patina called glamour than modern mosques with continental assurance and Urban decore. And here I am all of a sudden at the end of the column with scarcely room for a bow. I don't gauge my bows well lately anyhow.

How To Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND.

HIGH blood pressure is one of the common ailments complained of in modern times. It was unrecognized by the old-time practitioner. Even now it may not be discovered until it has left its damaging effect upon the body.

Frequently I am asked what the blood pressure should be at different ages. A sort of "rule of thumb" for determining the normal blood pressure is to add one hundred to the age. This will give the approximate, but of course not wholly accurate answer.

The pressure found in a healthy person between 20 and 30 years of age varies between 100 and 120. As we grow older the blood pressure rises. This is due to certain changes which take place in the walls of the blood vessels. The small arteries become hard and lose their elasticity.

Since the health of the arteries greatly infuence the blood pressure, it is often said that "a man is as old as his arteries." Some persons of a given age show a tendency toward higher blood pressure than others. Every case must be considered on its individual merits.

Sometimes elevation of the pressure is for brief periods only. A steady high blood pressure is dangerous. It forces the heart to do extra work. This additional burden long carried weakens the heart and may damage that organ. It becomes enlarged and eventually is unable to function.

The damage is not to the heart alone. It may affect the kidneys. Bright's disease is often associated with high blood pressure. The physician will make regular urine examinations in cases of persistent high blood pressure.

Persons such as we are describing require rest and careful attention. Excitement and severe exertion should be avoided. The diet should be regulated. Excesses are always dangerous, but if the blood pressure is high it is important to avoid eating too much meat, meat soups, tea, coffee, alcohol and condiments.

Warm baths are beneficial, but hot baths are harmful. A person who suffers from high blood pressure should have a daily elimination. Constipation is dangerous, for it permits poisons to collect in the body.

The blood pressure of every person over 40 years of age should be taken at least once a year. If it is too high, early discovery will permit much to be done which will prevent damaging effects on the heart and kidneys.

Bear in mind that the individual element enters into the matter. We are not alike, and what is above the average for one may not be abnormal after all. It is foolish to worry over it.

The Reviewing Stand

By TOM JONES.

THESE are days in which much is being written of Warren G. Harding, former President of the United States. And it is being disclosed that plans are in the making for the compilation of other volumes about him. These by some of his closest associates and friends which will serve to reveal him as he really was to those who knew him best. In this connection it is interesting to note that he, like William McKinley, knew his way about East Liverpool. Here he had many admiring intimates. These were royal to him in all of his political campaigns that included races for the governorship, the senatorship and the presidency.

It was when he was the nominee of the Republicans for the governorship of Ohio in 1910 when he essayed defeating Governor Judson Harmon for a second term that he perhaps came to East Liverpool to make his initial address as a candidate for office. His appearance here was on Monday evening, Oct. 17 of that year. The meeting on this occasion was one of the high points of the political campaign of that year which was in the mid-term of President William Howard Taft. Both of the dominant parties were then jockeying for presidential positions in 1912.

At the time Harding was a former lieutenant governor and ex-state senator. He had been the running mate of Myron T. Herrick in 1904 when the latter was elected governor of the state. When Governor Herrick was renominated in 1906 Mr. Harding refused the second place on the ticket for re-election. Then he may have made a political error which perhaps changed the whole course of his future. Had he remained upon the ticket the chances were practically certain that he would have won the place. As it turned out the man named to run in his stead, Andrew L. Harris of Preble county, did win it. Governor Herrick was then defeated by Robert Pattison of Cincinnati. But the latter succumbed in office a few months after his inauguration. And Andrew L. Harris became the governor, the place to which Harding would have succeeded had he elected to stand for re-election that year. Judson Harmon defeated Governor Harris when the latter sought election to this position in 1904. And Warren G. Harding disputed his re-election in 1910.

A reception committee headed by Robert Perry of East Liverpool, then the county chairman, went to Wellsville to meet Candidate Harding on the early evening of Oct. 17. He was brought to the Thompson house in the automobile of Colonel John L. Taylor. Other members of this reception committee were: John J. Purinton, Colonel J. N. Taylor, George E. Davidson, J. H. Simms, R. C. Heddleston, J. H. Brookes, Hal W. Harker, John L. Sullivan and James S. Hilbert.

With Mr. Harding upon that occasion was the Honorable Granville Mooney, a former speaker of the House of Representatives and a then candidate for secretary of state. He was after the place held then by Carmi Thompson, now of Cleveland. There was also the Honorable P. Sullivan, who had been the United States district attorney for northern Ohio.

There were other state and county candidates present as well as Congressman James Kennedy of Youngstown who was being opposed by John J. Whitacre of Canton. There were delegations present from Salem, Lisbon, Wellsville and other near-by points. A long list of vice-presidents of prominent citizens from all of the surrounding localities and in East Liverpool were present to hear the man who was later destined to occupy the White House.

It so happened that upon the morning of the day in which Mr. Harding appeared in East Liverpool that year Julia Ward Howe, the author of the "Battle Hmyn of the Republic," succumbed at her Newport, R. I., home at the age of 92. And the day stood out also because that afternoon the first game of the World Series between the Athletics under Connie Mack, the present manager of the team, defeated the Cubs, directed by the late Frank Chance. The score was 4 to 1, the Indian Bender holding his opponents to three hits while the giant Overall, twirling for the vanquished, lost although he permitted but six safe drives.

Before dinner at the Thompson house that evening Mr. Harding met many of the leaders of his party in this locality. Then he delivered an impressive address. He was presented to the audience that heard him by John J. Purinton, who then was a candidate for state senator. Robert Perry called the meeting to order and introduced the chairman of the evening.

TEN minute schedules for the meeting were carried out upon the traction line into the city by Superintendent W. B. Thomas, then directing this means of transportation. Among the notables that sat upon the stage as candidates were Rudy B. Archer, candidate for state treasurer; J. G. Moore of Lisbon, then standing for common pleas judge; George E. Davidson and William C. Davidson, then candidates for representative and sheriff, respectively of this county; Ira Kannal, Harry McCamon and Lewis Walker who were running for county commissioner. The late Harry T. Hall was present as an aspirant for county treasurer; L. P. Metzger of Salem are prosecuting attorney; George Grosshans for infirmary director and Dr. W. A. Bean for coroner.

At the conclusion of the meeting Mr. Harding was taken with other members of his party to Steubenville by Attorney John Belknap, who was the head of the Jefferson county Republican committee.

The week that preceded the election was a notable one in East Liverpool and Columbiana county. The interim opened with a celebration of Hollowe'en, Monday being Oct. 31. It was that day also that the recently completed building of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters in West Sixth street was occupied following its erection at an initial cost of $15,000.

That day also inaugurated, if not the first, one of the first automobile tours of Columbiana county by Republican candidates. It was continued for two days. On the following Tuesday the first session of a night school sponsored by the East Liverpool board of education and the East Liverpool trades and labor council was held with 40 students present, some of them being men well along in years.

Addresses on that occasion were made by F. H. Warren, then the superintendent of schools; Will T. Blake, editor of the Potters Herald and Thomas Wilkinson, president of trades and labor council.

THIS school had more in attendance the second than the first night. Its teachers consisted of Professor Louis Manley, then science teacher in the high school and later of the Pitt university faculty of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Professor H. D. Wilce, Grant street principal; Professor S. W. Alexander, principal of the Neville nstitute and Professor J. R. Brothers of the Lincoln school. Professor Thomas Berryman, now of Pittsburgh, but then of the high school faculty here also rendered valuable assistance in the educational departure which at this time was given initiation.

On Wednesday night of this first week in November that year there was another outstanding political meeting in East Liverpool. For then Governor Judson Harmon himself came to town to attempt the breaking down of the sentiment that had been developed by the previous visitation of his opponent, Warren G. Harding. He was accompanied by Honorable Atlee Pomerene of Canton who at the time was the candidate for lieutenant governor.

The meeting was held in the Ceramic theater. Mayor Samuel W. Crawford president and introduced Governor Harmon to the audience that greeted him. While Governor Harmon was speaking here Mr. Pomerene went to Wellsville and made an address. Then he returned to speak to the waiting audience in the Ceramic theater while Governor Harmon rushed on to Wellsville. In the meantime John J. Whitacre of Canton spoke to the people in the theater here.

Other members of the party that accompanied Governor Harmon that night in East Liverpool were Guy Marchant, his secretary; Ben F. Allen the later Washington correspondent of the Plain Dealer who then was in charge of the Columbus bureau of his paper and J. W. Faulker of the Cincinnati Enquirer.

The visiting Democrats arrived in East Liverpool from Lisbon following a hard day of campaigning during which they had visited Alliance, Youngstown, Girard, Salem and the county seat. The Ohio fight by that time had become exceedingly warm. In Columbus the same evening Philander Knox, secretary of state for President Taft, spoke.

THE following night Myron T. Herrick, former governor, made an address at Columbus for the state ticket. Joseph B. Foraker, who had some time previously been retired from the United States senate, also returned to the Republican hustings in an effort to have his party win this election. He took occasion to pay his respects to Former President Roosevelt in his speeches. He maintained that some of his viewpoints were more fantastic than any presented by William Jennings Bryan.

John J. Lenzt, who recently passed away in Columbus, was then a Democratic candidate for United States Senator against Charles Dick. He had several days previously visited East Liverpool and made an address. Senator Dick upon the Friday evening of this eventful political week made an outstanding address in Lisbon. This meeting was presided over by Judge J. A. Martin. It was held in the Smiley opera house. The same evening James A. Garfield, former member of Roosevelt's cabinet, made an address in Youngstown.

It had been expected also that Mother Jones, who passed away in her 100th year more than a year ago was to have visited East Liverpool during the end of that week. On Saturday of that same week, Nov. 5, John McShane, was appointed probation officer by Probate Judge Louis T. Farr.

The final meeting of that political campaign in East Liverpool was held on the Monday night before the election, Nov. 7. It was a gathering that assembled in the Midway building of the East End at which addresses were made by John J. Purinton, Judge L. T. Farr of Lisbon and George Davidson. Earlier in the week the East End had entertained a district meeting of Odd Fellows. More than 300 persons attended it.

The election was a disappointing one to many folks hereabouts for Governor Harmon won over Harding and Whitacre defeated Congressman Kennedy. Atlee Pomerene was elected lieutenant governor and later became senator Harding, Harmon and Pomerene were later to be considered presidential timber. Harding then said he would never be politically active again.

ALLISON WINS INDEPENDENT TICKET PLACE

Vote Recount Changes Nomination for Clerk.

Dwight Allison, Carolina avenue barber, Citizen's party nominee, was named as the Independent candidate for city clerk of Chester by the executive board of the party Tuesday night, after a recount of the votes cast at the convention Saturday night resulted in a tie between Allison and Virgil Hasson, present clerk.

At the convention, Hasson won the nomination by one vote, 82 to 81. Allison demanded a recount, which was held Tuesday night, the result being 81 to 81. Joseph Finley, chairman of the Independent party, ruled that in case of a tie in the nominations, the executive committee, composed of J. C. Cunningham, James Finley and James Laughley, could declare the place vacant and name a nominee.

Previous to the convention, Allison had been a candidate for the Independent position, while Hasson sought renomination on the Republican ticket, for which he was unopposed.

PLAN REPAIRS AT DAM NO. 8

Machinery, Maneuver Boat To Be Painted In Spring.

In keeping with an innovation being developed by Maj. W. D. Styer, Pittsburgh district engineer on the Ohio river, work will probably be started on painting all machinery in the power house and the maneuver boat at Dam No. 8 here in the spring, officials said today.

As an aid to safe navigation Maj. Styer has ordered that the head of guide walls, gates, check posts and guard rails be painted in black and white squares. This is expected to enable the pilots to see the locks at a greater distance and aid on dark foggy nights.

The interior of the power houses on the locks is to be given a standard maroon color. The maneuver boat at the local dam was painted on the exterior last season and machinery and woodwork inside will be painted in connection with the spring project.

Traffic was light on the Ohio river, three boats being locked through at Dam No. 8 Monday night and Tuesday. They were: The Ranger, Weirton to Pittsburgh, with eight empty barges; the Edgar Thompson, Pittsburgh to Mingo, with four barges of coke and one barge of flue dust and return with six empty barges; the Shawnee Wheeling to Pittsburgh, with one empty gasoline barge.

Business Conditions in U. S. Improving, Says J. D. Rockefeller

93-Year-Old Philanthropist, Now At Ormond, Fla., Is Greatly Encouraged.

(Copyright, 1932, By The Associated Press).

ORMOND, Fla., Feb. 10—John D. Rockefeller Sr., told The Associated Press Tuesday indications are business conditions throughout the country are showing improvement and that he is greatly encouraged.

The 93-year-old philanthropist directed his remarks concerning business to a corresponden. while posing for photographs in his garden for the first time since he was taken slightly ill with a cold two weeks ago.

"From talks I have had with prominent men of the country, and reports reaching me from other sources," Rockefeller said, "indications are that business conditions are improving for this, I am greatly encouraged.

Rockefeller showed not the slightest effects from recent confinement because of the cold.

In fact, he was so delighted to be out in the warm sunshine again that once he stopped and sang a hymn as he gazed at the myriad of brilliant flowers and shrubs that surrounded his estate.

"Does that feel like the grip of a sick man?" The genial philanthropist said with a chuckle as he shook hands firmly with the correspondent. "I feel better than ever before.

BEAVER RIVER, ROAD PROGRAM IS OUTLINED

Plans List Expenditure Of Large Sum.

Approximately $7,000,000 will be expended during 1932 in Beaver county for the betterment of river navigation and the elimination of dangerous crossings and construction of new roads for the improvement of vehicular traffic.

The principal project in the vicinity of Midland will be the proposed $6,000,000 dam in the Ohio river at Montgomery island, near Industry, which the government plans to begin this year. It will require about two years to complete the stationary dam, which will eliminate three movable dams—Lock No. 4 at Legionville, Lock No. 5 at Freedom and Lock No. 7 at Merrill.

The main highway improvements will be centered around Rochester, including construction of a new bridge over the Beaver river between Rochester and Bridgewater to replace the structure destroyed by fire in April, 1931. The proposed construction of a new highway to connect Rochester, East Rochester and Freedom, which will eliminate the three "death grade" crossings between the three communities, is also contemplated for 1932.

The new bridge must be built at the expense of the state highway department, while the cost of the new highway will be borne jointly by the highway department, the Pennsylvania railroad, the county and Rochester borough. The Ohio river dam will be paid for out of government funds.

Other improvements relative to the new Rochester Freedom boulevard, include the elimination of the "death-trap" crossings. Considerable property has been purchased by the Pennsylvania railroad preparatory to re-aligning the four tracks now in use and the construction of two additional tracks from the Conway yards through Rochester.

The new road is the outgrowth of an order issued last year by the public service commission to eliminate the grade crossings.

"NOW we can advertise it"

Products are nearly always put on the market before they are advertised. Quite frequently, changes have to be made in an article before the public generally will accept it. Color, design, flavor—those are some of the things the public has to be consulted about. Sometimes a product won't sell at all and simply has to be discontinued. As soon as people show that they welcome an article and as soon as all refinements and improvements have been added, then you could hear the manufacturer say, if you could be in his office, "Now we can advertise."

When you buy advertised goods, you may know they have gone through the experimental stages. You may be sure that the manufacturer knows they are right and that he is willing to stake his reputation on them. You may be confident that you are buying goods that have sold and that would continue to sell without any advertising at all. For advertising merely lets all of the people know—now—what considerable numbers would find out by word of mouth ten years from now.

Of course, advertising goes a step farther. Word of mouth hardly ever tells all the uses of a product. It often doesn't give the real reasons for its superiority. Advertising tells people all about a product and the numerous ways in which they can use it.

Whatever you buy, therefore, let the advertisements be your guide. When the manufacturer says, "Now we can advertise it," you know that you can safely say, "Now we can buy it."

NEW TROUBLES FACE SPAIN AS PRISONERS SAIL

General Revolutionary Strike Feared by Republic.

By The Associated Press.

BARCELONIA, Spain, Feb 10.—A threat of further labor and syndicalist troubles, with the possibility of a general revolutionary strike, kept authorities of the Spanish republic on the alert today, after departure of the prison ship Buenos Aires with 110 prisoners for an unknown point of exile.

The prisoners were some of those arrested during the syndicalist strikes and riots last month. As the ship sailed a crowd of sympathizers upon the docks shouted "Long live anarchy! Down with the Republic!"

The foreign prisoners, starting to dreary exile, answered with a muffled shout from their portholes. The guards, feeling secure, stood by tolerantly.

There were few police visible, but large groups of them were concealed at strategic points. The syndicalists kept quiet, too, but it was understood many leading groups were urging fulfilment of last month's threat to declare a general strike.

TORONTO SEEKS TO AVENGE LONE DEFEAT

Knights Here On Saturday

Potters Heavy Favorites to Repeat Former Win.

BY ROBERT ELLIOTT,
Sports Editor, The Review.

"GABBY" KUNZLER'S Toronto high school cagemen will invade the East Liverpool high school gym Saturday night to do battle with Tom Dixon's Potters and they'll be aching for revenge in a great big way.

If you'll remember about two weeks ago, Toronto had won six games in a row and then the Potters paid a visit to the home of the Red Knights. When the fracas was over Toronto was a thoroughly whipped ball club, by a score of 33 to 21. Not a bit disheartened by this walloping, the Knights went right out the following night and battered a fairly good Follansbee quint. When this last week-end they trimmed Follansbee again and also scored their second victory of the season over Mingo. So you can see just how anxious the Knights are to reverse that lone setback, which kept them from smashing a record of 10 straight triumphs.

Regulars Back.

However the odds are that the men of Kunzler will find themselves carrying around an additional defeat when they leave for home Saturday night Kunzler is basing his hopes for a win here on the fact that some of his regulars were not in the best of physical shape when they bowed to the Potters at Toronto. Despite all these facts, the Potters should have little trouble in repulsing the Knights once more.

Toronto will likely start the fracas here with Phillips and Swaykus at the forwards, Brem at center, and Comm and Miller at the guards.

Dixon gave his hard-working boys a rest Monday night but all except Cullen were out for the first drill of the week Tuesday. Tom stressed offensive work the greater share of the session but the Potters went through no hard scrimmages.

Lineup Set.

There is comparatively little doubt about the Ceramic City starting five. Witherow and Pennebaker are almost fixtures at the forwards as are Turner and Laughline at the guards. Cullen looks like a probable center beginner with big Bill Weaver right behind in case he falters.

Young Bobby Stewart is improving all the time and is still battling hard to get into that first string lineup.

Nate Lorah's Reserves will meet the Dover Reserves Friday night here in a preliminary tilt to the Potter Varsity-Dover battle.

On Saturday night the East Liverpool and Toronto girls' teams will clash in the prelim.

The first game on each night will start at 8.

Ceramics Smash Sharon Quintet

Eddie Lane Leads Attack With 15 Points.

Led by Lane, Cartwright and Stewart, the East Liverpool Ceramics captured a free-scoring game from the Sharon Traxlers Tuesday night on the Chester city hall court, 33 to 30.

Eddie Lane accounted for 15 points on six field goals and a trio of free throws. Cartwright and Stewart both checked in with eight points. Unlaf registered five field goals and three fouls to lead Sharon in scoring.

TWINS COACH RIVAL TEAMS

By The Associated Press.

OGILVIE, Minn. — Donald and Chester Johnson, twins, coach rival high school basketball teams here and at Onamia, respectively.

In addition to having squads with the same scholastic initials, "O. H. S.," the twins have these things in common:

Both schools have about the same enrollment and they represent towns of equal size; the colors of both schools are Orange and Black; and both have been successful.

TEAM AVERAGE IS 235 POUNDS

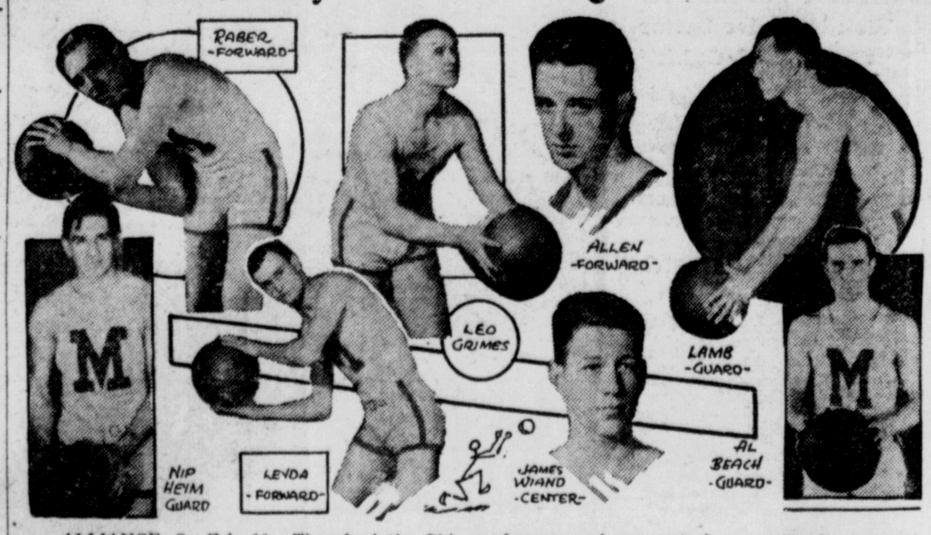
Mt. Union, Only Undefeated Quint in Conference



ALLIANCE, O., Feb. 10.—They lead the Ohio conference and are out for a second consecutive championship with eight straight wins this year and 23 of 24 in the last two years. Since Hiram defeated Case, Mount Union is the only undefeated team that has played a full schedule.

The veterans shown above are eight of Coach Wright's eleven experienced men and are all seniors except Allen. Each one has added appreciably to Mount's total of 445 points in 10 games this season.

Two important engagements are before these boys this week. Hiram will be met at Alliance tonight and Wooster at Wooster Saturday night. Hiram reversed the tables on one Ohio conference leader, Case, last Saturday by showing real strength.

Tunney Not to Fight Again

Former Heavy Champ Hates to See Dempsey Try Again.

BY ALAN GOULD,
Associated Press Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Those who have been building up the pleasant fiction that Gene Tunney contemplates a fighting come-back may just as well knock down the structure of their imagination.

On the authority of Tunney himself, the former world's champion has never and will not entertain the slightest idea of returning to the ring.

Enjoyed Writing.

"When I retired from the ring, I meant it," he told me today. I reminded him of stories that had been printed and recently repeated, predicting circumstances might dictate otherwise, or that he might yield to some pressure.

"Yes, I know all about that," he replied, "and of course I cannot stop anyone from making a suggestion in the newspapers as to what I may or may not do. Nor do I take them seriously.

"The way I feel now is that I have my own life to lead and work out. I have my private interests. I am happy in what I am doing. I enjoyed writing my life story, yet I am surprised that so much interest is shown in it.

"I still am keenly interested in boxing and always will be. Why not? It was a big part of my life. But what a fool I would be ever to think of attempting a come-back."

But Jack Dempsey, it was suggested, appeared to be contemplating one.

"Yes, and you know, I hate to think of it," replied the man who twice whipped the great man mauler.

"We all like to think of Dempsey at his best, as a great champion. The reputation he made means something. It means more, I think than the risk of being beaten now by men he would have whipped easily in his prime. He was beginning to slow up, four or five years ago, and it would be just that much harder for him now to come back.

Carnera Boosted.

"Carnera, with that remarkable left and his size, would be difficult for Dempsey to beat. Schmeling, improving as rapidly as he has, would have the advantage of youth and ruggedness. I do not think Sharkey would go down so easily again in a bout with the former champion."

"You know," Gene added, "Dempsey did not want a third fight with me. When Tex Rickard proposed it, Jack in effect asked: 'what and take a chance of being punched blind? No thanks' ".

Malone Leaves Saturday

Cub Twirler Goes to Camp Early; Plans Hard Work.

By The Associated Press.

MILAN, O., Feb. 10.—If the old adage, "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," is true, then Pat Malone, prominent citizen of this village and Chicago Cub baseball pitcher, will be a groggy man this spring.

Providing of course, Pat holds to his avowed plans. He said there will be nothing but hard work for him and that he's looking forward to a banner season, the best he has ever had in the big time show.

Too Much Golf.

The genial Pat has been busy the last few days getting things in shape to leave Saturday for Catalina Island, training quarters of the Cubs. There were some cows and chickens to dispose of before he could depart.

But in the midst of his work, he paused long enough to inform the world that he was going to attend strictly to business this year. "From now on it's going to be baseball and nothing else," he said. "Last year, I was golf nutty and I was thinking about golf most of the time, with the result that my season was not such a great success, because golf interfered with work.

When I get to Catalina next week the old golf clubs and everything else goes into the attic and baseball gets my full attention."

Pat signs his checks Percy L., but doesn't like the name. Last year was his worst season in the major league. A series of escapades in the spring won him the sobriquet of "baseball's bad boy," but now he is determined to live down that name and win ball games. He spends most of the off season hunting and trapping around Sandusky, but takes time off for a trip to the wilds of Canada after big game.

Malone went to the Cubs in 1928 from Minneapolis and proceeded to win 18 and lose 12 games. The next year and 1930 were excellent seasons for him, and he won more games in three years than any other pitcher in the National league, but a little too much "horseplay," as he termed it, last year, ruined his record. "But I'm coming back," he said, "I believe the Cubs will win the pennant and I expect to do my full share and this goes for the world series too."

Little Overweight.

Malone is young yet, only 29, and expects to have several more good seasons. He's a little overweight now but expects to be down to 190 pounds within a few weeks. He stands 6 feet tall throws right handed but bats from the port side.

The twirler will leave here Saturday with a light heart. He was called home from Chicago a few days ago because his little daughter was suffering from pneumonia. She has recovered now and there's nothing to worry Pat except the problem of tapering off his waist line.

When Shelbyville, Ind., fans booed a basketball referee's decision. Coach H. T. McCullough of Shelbyville shouted for the referee to foul the crowd.

would have the advantage of youth and ruggedness. I do not think Sharkey would go down so easily again in a bout with the former champion."

Stevens Trails In Prelims

Lake Placid Boy 4 Seconds Behind Swiss Youth.

By EDWARD J. NEIL,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Feb. 10.—Four seconds behind, the United States faced the loss today of mastery in the bob run, the Olympic sport it dominated in the 1928 Winner Olympics.

Four years ago Jack Heaton, an American living abroad, journeyed to St. Moritz, for a vacation, got a sled and a partner, and won the two-man event.

Fiske Did Same

Billy Fiske, did the same thing in the four-man event, and the United States became nominal leader of the sport.

Then the United States, planning for the Winter Olympics here, built the finest, most daring run in the world down a barren mountain side. The boys learned to take its tremendous curves at 70 miles an hour.

Today, entering final heats of the two-man event, Hubert Stevens of Lake Placid, was second to a 20-year-old Swiss, Reto Capadrutt.

Capadrutt set up runs of 2 minutes, 5.88 seconds, and 2:07.21, both better than Stevens' world mark of 2:07 that stood until yesterday.

Stevens was second with a total of 4 minutes 17.37 seconds, but his second run, on runners heated almost whitehot with blow torches, was clocked in 2:04.28, giving him the world's record.

Jack Heaton put together runs of 2:15.02 and .207.51 to land third place, but he, like the champions of Germany, Rumania, Italy, Belgium, France and Austria, seemed all but out of the competition.

Among the 10,000 Who braved the five-below-zero weather, to watch was Rear Admiral Richard Byrd. He liked the sport so well he promptly promoted himself a ride with Harry Grayson Martin, member of one of the United States teams.

Carl Schaefer, young university student of Vienna, was crowned men's Olympic figure skating champion early today.

The judges reaching their decision several hours after completion of the men's competition last night.

Here 'N' There IN THE Sport World

IN rolling up 11 victories in 12 starts this season, Tom Dixon's Potters have scored a total of 342 points to their opponents' 283. This means that the Dixonmen have averaged 28½ points per contest which is pretty fast stepping in any competition. The opponents have been held to an average of 24 points a game, giving a fine illustration as to how many close battles the Potters have engaged in this season. Of the 11 wins scored by the Ceramics, six have been by three points or less. Two contests have been taken by a one-point margin, Salem, 24-23, and Wellsville, 27-26.

Bill Laughlin, the Potters' high-scoring guard, has been closing in rapidly on Dick Witherow in the scoring chase. Dick, however, has been tallying steadily and now has a total of 97 points, an average of eight per clash. Laughlin is 20 points behind, having scored 77. Jordy Pennebaker, in turn, is 23 points in the rear of Laughlin. This Pennebaker looks like a midget when he comes on the floor with Laughlin, Witherow, Weaver, etc., but there's no one on the squad with more fight. He's won a first string position and if you think he isn't going to be tough to dislodge, just stick around and see.

TOURNAMENT time is rolling around and the Tri-State basketball pot is already starting to boil. It's more than a month before the Junior Tri-State affair will be held, but officials of that tournament already report a great deal of interest. One inquiry has been received from a team in Philadelphia and they assured the Tri-State Junior workers that they'd be on hand. The Junior officials have dropped their weight limit altogether and the only restriction now is that the player must be under 20 years of age when the tournament takes place.

Plans are going steadily along for the Seniors and Girls Tri-State tournaments. The Senior Tri-State, oldest of the three tourneys, will be held this year on April 1-2 and the girls will battle on March 25-26. The Junior Tri-State is scheduled for March 18-19. We know of at least one team that is planning on entering the Senior tourney for we received a letter today from McKeesport Y. M. C. A. inquiring about the tournament and they were more than enthusiastic. The girls' tournament last year was a howling success from the very start and should be better than ever this year.

IRISH CAGERS FACE TOURNEY

By International News Service.

COLUMBUS, O.—The basketball supremacy of the state's parochial schools will be decided at the annual Catholic meet at the K. of C. gymnasium here on March 11 and 12. Several institutions already have entered and many more are expected to file applications before Feb. 20, the closing date.

Among the teams which have been conceded the best chance of eclipsing the title are St. Francis high of Newark and St. Vincent's of Mount Vernon. Both of these teams has displayed excellent form throughout the season, which has been marked by the usual number of upsets.

The committee in charge of the tournament has announced that five trophies will be awarded. In addition to medal awards for all important team selections, championship emblems will be presented to members of the team winning the title.

WILD PITCHER'S ARM IS BETTER

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—Wally Brush, the "walk-'em-or-whiff-'em kid," sold to the New York Giants for $10,000 in 1929 and to the Cleveland Indians for $5,000 in 1930, is looking for a job.

He arrived here from Williston, Fla., where he had been playing semi-pro ball, with the news that neuritis, which ended his big league career, had disappeared.

He said he was dickering with three big leagues and five AA clubs for his services.

The first game Brush ever pitched for Tampa in the old Southeastern league tells his story. He struck out 12 and walked 14 men. Few hits were ever made off him.

The University of Idaho has scheduled an intersectional football game with Utah Agricultural college at Boise Idaho, next Thanksgiving day.

GRIMES OFFICIALLY JOINS CUBS

Burleigh Grimes, hero of the 1931 world series when he checked the Philadelphia Athletics twice for the St. Louis Cardinals, is shown signing a one-year contract with the Chicago Cubs, to whom he was traded in the deal that sent Hack Wilson to the Cards on the first leg of his journey to Brooklyn. President William L. Veeck (left) got Grimes' signature.

Greer Boasts Wins Over Many Outstanding Boxers

Johnny Dunn Slated For Hard Battle in Scrap Here Friday Night.

This Rosy "Tiger" Greer, Canton colored boxing satellite, who is scheduled to trade blows with Johnny Dunn in the 10-round main event of a fistic show in the Eagles' auditorium here Friday night, boasts of a fairly impressive record during his short career.

Here are some of the boys, met and defeated by Greer: Tiger Walker, Tony Duffy, Al Dundee, Bobby Williams, Zeke Jones, Jack DeNeri, Homer Ronan, Press Johnson, Jackie Coogan, Frankie Porto, Jackie Miller.

Just last week Greer went up against Tiger Walker at Lancaster and won out after a terrific struggle that had the fans on their ears. Local fans know what Tiger Walker is and consequently should have plenty of respect for any one who could hand him the short end of the decision.

Dunn himself realizes that he has a plenty tough scrap on his hands and is working hard. The New Kensington featherweight will have a great edge in boxing ability but that won't do him a lot of good if Greer ever lands one of his punishing blows.

Paul McGuire, who manages Greer, thinks the bout will be a great fight. He says Rosy is a classy boy when pitted against a good boxer and he surely will be up against nothing else when he steps in the ring with Dun.

Kenny Davis, fast-stepping local 130-pounder, is also in for a tough evening in the six-round semi-final when he meets Young Terry of Akron. Foutts has been trying to match these two for a long time, but something has always interfered. Terry has assured Foutts that he will be on hand Friday night, the local promoter announced.

Kenny has been going along at a rapid pace, gaining decisions over every foe he has met in the last few months. If he wins over Terry, Davis will be firmly entrenched in the top list of featherweights in this section.

Four other bouts, two four-rounders and a pair of three-round affairs complete the card.

Muggsy Mullane of Canton has been announced as the referee by Foutts.

"WHY LOOK YOUR AGE?"
asks Billie Burke

"I really am 39," says this famous star. "And I don't see why any woman should look her age.

"We on the stage must keep our youthful freshness. To do this through the years means, above everything, guarding complexion beauty. For years I have used Lux Toilet Soap regularly—it keeps my skin amazingly clear and soft."

Years ago Broadway stars eagerly adopted Hollywood's favorite beauty care—Lux Toilet Soap. Actually 98% of the lovely complexions you see on the screen are cared for by this fragrant white soap that costs only 10¢

WEDS GIRL HE TRIED TO DROWN

By International News Service.

DORTMUND, Germany—A Eurone an tragedy, much like Theodore Dreiser's "American Tragedy," will be crowned by a happy end when Hildegrad Schwiersch, 23, marries her would-be-slayer Albert Michalski, 26-year-old miner, in the prison of Dortmund, Westphalia.

Michalski told the police he entered into a suicide pact with the girl because her parents refused to consent to their marriage. He threw her into the Weser-Ems canal and then when she struggled hurled a brick at her. But his nerve failed, he said, when he wanted to jump in to drown himself.

Two sailors rescued the girl, whose favorable testimony in court got Michalski off with a six-months sentence on a charge of assault with intention to kill. They will be married despite parental objection.

Chinese Defenders Hold Positions.

The Chinese defenders of the Woosung forts again clung tenaciously to their positions in the face of terrific shelling. Japanese airplanes also bombed the forts again but failed to dislodge the Chinese machine gunners, firmly planted in shell holes and crannies.

Shells and bullets from the Chapei conflict continued to land in the international settlement, thudding against the walls of the municipal police station, in the Kongkew area, at such a rate that the station was ordered closed. The post for a week has been the only occupied building in that part of the settlement.

Twenty - five students were arrested. Handbills were circulated, meetings called, and a parade through the city attempted. Police broke up the demonstration.

Air Raid Interrupts Interview.

Private Lawin's discourse on feminine points of beauty was suddenly interrupted.

"Hey! Get out of there," he shouted, and started running along the bank of Soochow creek to stop a Chinese refugee who was trying to wriggle through the barbed wire entanglements. The hapless Chinese retreated hastily.

Further conversation was interrupted by a roar overhead. Private Lawin leaned over the sandbag wall excitedly as Japanese airplanes swooped low and dropped a load of bombs on battle-scarred Chapei across the river.

"That's what makes this war interesting," he exclaimed, when the spitting of Chinese anti-aircraft guns had subsided with the retirement of the bomber.

"It's just like a movie thriller. Only it's real. And just when things get kind of slow a stray shell is liable to land within a few feet of you."

Private Lawin said he was 21 years old and had been a soldier only nine months, but—

"Things got kind of quiet around Cornucopia and I hadn't been many places, so I joined the army to see the world."

Going into the final day 4.28 seconds behind the 29-year-old Swiss after the first two heats yesterday, Stevens turned in two almost unbelievably perfect runs of 1:59.69 and 1:27.68, both times smashing the record Capadrutte set on his first run today. His final total time for the four runs of the competition was 8 minutes 14.74 seconds. Capadrutt finished his last run in a 1:59.67 to take second place, 1.54 seconds behind Stevens.

Another delegate left $3,000 and numerous persons said they spent from 200 to $500.

THE THEATER

VOGUE FOR TERROR IN MOVIE FARE IS SEEN IN 'WESTERNS'

Spooks Share Honors With Star, Tom Keene.

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD — The vogue for that little dash of terror in our movie fare these days hasn't spared even the galloping "western."

ROBBIN COONS

The first "meller" in which spooks share honors with the dashing, clean-living hero is in the making now, with Tom Keene starring.

It used to be that if you walked into an interior set for a "western" you were pretty confident that the scene was the parlor of the old homestead where the mustache-twirling villain was forcing the gal's father to sign the papers.

JUST CLEAN FUN

But go to the Keene set and you'll find the studio cobweb-spinner busily spraying antiquity on rafters and walls, creating that ghostly, deserted atmosphere associated with haunted houses.

In such a setting does Keene, clad mysteriously in flowing black cloak and mask, appear and disappear in pursuit of his Robin Hood inclinations, and the girl's elder aunt screams piercingly in the half-dark to make another sequence terrifying.

On the sidelines, among the other cowboys, sits one lean and lanky individual whose forearms and hands have been carpeted with coarse hair—the last word in synthetic terror. You know those hairy claws are coming through a window to seize our heroine sooner or later.

The horror element in the western, of course, is being handled in such a manner that it can be labeled good, clean fun—nothing to scare the children away. The story's about a gang of crooks who make a "ghost town" their rendezvous.

ENTHUSIASTIC FAN

Keene, who used to be George Duryea before he went open space-and-great-outdoors with a successful bang, tells of a letter he received the other day from a little girl who had organized a "fan club" for him in her home town.

"We had an election here to decide which of the western stars was most popular," she wrote, "and you won easily.

"You should have," was added, apparently as an afterthought, "because I voted for you six times myself."

Current Playbills

CERAMIC

Jackie Cooper, the phenomenal towheaded boy who teamed so effectively with wistful and brunette Robert Coogan in the first Percy Crosby story to reach the screen, "Skippy," co-stars again with Coogan in a new Shantytown adventure for the Crosby successor, 'Sooky" which opens today at the Ceramic theater.

Paramount, which produced the first Crosby hit, in its successor wisely has maintained as much of the original cast and technical staff as possible.

In addition to Cooper as "Skip," and Coogan as "Sooky," five other members of the 'Skippy" cast carry on in roles which they created. They are Jackie Searl as "Sidney," Willard Robertson as "Dr. Skiner," Enid Bennett as "Mrs. Skiner," Helen Jerome Eddy as "Mrs. Wayne," and Guy Oliver as "Mr Moggs."

Norman Taurog again directs. Sam Mintz and Don Marquis contribute to the adaptation and dialogue, the same capacities they occupied for "Skippy," and all in all, "Sooky" should prove quite satisfying and entertaining.

The story centers chiefly in the efforts of Skippy and Sooky to build their own cadet corps after they have decided the Boone Boys in the fashionable neighborhood are too snooty and need a ribbing. Their ruses, tricks, frolics and good turns, with and at the expense of fathers, mothers, dogs and little pets and trinkets, constitute a luscious slice of typical boyhood.

The conclusion is emotionally potent.

STATE

Gloria Swanson in "Tonight or Never," based on the fiery and tempestuous Belasco stage success, comes to the State theater today. Produced and presented by Samuel Goldwyn, it brings that producer's opulent and lavish hand to a play fashioned by the greatest stage genius of this generation, the late David Belasco, as the last and final effort to his distinguished career.

"Tonight or Never" is a Gloria Swanson returned to the emotional tempo of her first talking picture, "The Trespasser," or the earlier silent "Sadie Thompson." It gives her a warm, fervent role, rich and strong in mature womanly feeling.

Melvyn Douglas, the young stage player who last year created one of the outstanding personal successes of the season in the Belasco stage production, not only duplicates his stage role on the screen, but has earned for his perfromance opposite Miss Swanson the ecroniums of being a find and a discovery. Critics have hailed him as a new type of romantic lead,—"an American type, fair and light, completely in contrast to the former dark and Latin type." Others of the stage cast which Mr. Goldwyn brought to the studios of the filming of the play include Ferdinand Gottschalk, Robert Greig, Warburton Gamble and Greta Mayer. Alison Skipworth, the distinguished character actress, is the one recruit.

The story concerns an impetuous opera star of Budapest and her search for success and happiness. Critics praise her voice, but deny that it has genius. They accuse her of having no soul. To the irritation of that, there is added the attention of an unknown young man who follows her everywhere like a shadow. Nella is told that her ardent pursuer is the kept protege of a doddering old Marchesa,—"a gigolo." Taunted by her critics for her singing and disturbed by the attentions of her admirer, sheer restlessness drives her to his apartment one night. The story then takes up his demand, "Tonight or Never," her answer and the strange phenomenon that made a great artist out of a great singer,—and a happy woman out of an unhappy girl.

BROWN, WHITE SPEAKERS AT STATE MEETS

Tax Association and Commissioners in Columbus.

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 10. — Discussion of Ohio's new tax code occupied delegates to the annual conventions at the Ohio Tax association and the County Commissioners' association here today. Both meetings, which opened yesterday, will close following the election of officers.

Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown told the commissioners that to lower taxes the state must reduce public expenditures, adding "there is no such thing as a new source of revenue. It is always the same—the people."

Other speakers were Governor George White, State Highway Director O. W. Merrell and W. A. Greenlund, Cleveland, president of the tax association.

Governor White reiterated belief that an extra session of the legislature to provide unemployment relief should be avoided if possible. He added he had no present intention of convening the assembly, although Mayor Henry W. Worley of Columbus declared he believed a session would be called "if a definite program were outlined and presented to the governor."

Both Merrell and Brown said they looked with disfavor on curtailment of the state highway program, but the director urged "sound economy by widening and resurfacing old roads instead of constructing new ones."

BRITAIN MAY BREAK SOVIET TRADE PACT

"Dumping" of Russian Goods on Market Is Hit.

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—The British government is considering renouncing the trade treaty with Soviet Russia, made by the late Labor government, The Daily Mail said today, to stop the "dumping" of Russian goods on the home market.

The announcement would be made, the paper said, shortly after the return of Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon from the disarmament conference at Geneva. The British trade balance is imperilled under the present condition, it said, with imports of Russian goods exceeding British exports by nearly $100,000,000 a year.

Besides, The Mail added, most British goods bought by Russia have been purchased on credit and Russia now owes Great Britain about $200,000,000, while Russian goods have flooded the home market at prices sometimes 40 per cent below British prices.
